Last week, it was my brother's fifth birthday and we all went to the zoo to see lots of different animals. First, we went to see the gorillas. The glass around their enclosure is not flimsy; it is much tougher than normal glass. Next, we moved to see the monkeys, then the elephants. Their enclosure is huge so that they have sufficient space to move around. The giraffes are their next-door neighbours. I watched as one reached up with effortless ease, to the very top of a tree. My brother has a real affection for penguins so that was our next stop. We were all laughing as we watched them waddle and hop. It was amazing to see how fast they were when in the water. We went to the zoo cafe at lunchtime. Mum ordered tea, dad had filtered coffee, we had juice and we all ate chips and beans. After lunch, we sat beside a big fountain and ate ice cream. When we were finished, we went to see the lions. A zookeeper and animal welfare officer were giving a special talk about them. I took some photographs to show the children in my class. Our final stop was the red panda enclosure. On the way out, I asked if we could go to the gift shop. I had saved my pocket money so I could afford to buy my brother a cuddly penguin toy for his birthday. He loved it!
